Biography

I have lived in North Wales all my life. As a child most of my times was spent in Rhos-on-Sea where recently it felt very strange knocking on doors and actually staying put (to ask for votes) rather than running away.

I've had lots of different jobs ranging from working in garden centres during radioactive rainfall to Geological oil maps of the middle east just before the first gulf war to retained firefighter during the floods and the pier pavilion fire. I've worked at Coleg Llandrillo since 2001 in IT and have lectured in Graphics and Media. I'm currently branch secretary of the local Labour Party.

Having returned to Rhos as an alleged adult I felt it's time to give back to the community that helped shape me, hence my serving on the Bay of Colwyn Town Council. I enjoy problem solving and abhor unnecessary waste & inefficiency.

I didn't finish school, slipping through the educational system at the age of 14 so education and ambition amongst the youngsters is important to me.

I've two grown up daughters; one's training to be a GP locally and the other works for Alzheimer's research in Cambridge.
